Awesome pictures, even better with the proper identifications!! This shady trail follows a creek, so shoes that can get wet will provide more fun. Cameras are also suggested for this beautiful place. We'll put a map link and more info in the comments, as this trail is part of Pilot Mountain State Park.

You can even drive through Horne Creek 3 times to get closer to the trailhead -or- use the upper parking lot. Only high clearance vehicles should go through 2nd creek crossi... See more

After our morning walk we went to Bean Shoals near Horne Creek. Just a few of the cool things along the trail, enjoy😀

Thanks to Transylvania County Extension Master Gardeners for posting this! Open the image as it is a long image. Read which ones DON'T STING! Most native bees are solitary bees that don't sting as they are not protecting anything like a hive, nest or honey. Honey bees and yellow jackets are the ones to not disturb.

a comprehensive guide to Yellow Stripey Things
Carpenter Bee
• acts tough but can't actually hurt you
• has no concept of what glass is
• lives in your fence
• flies aggressively to try to scare you away
Honey Bee
• is the bee that helps the most
• excellent pollinator
• very friendly
• can only sting once
Bumblebee
• also pollinates stuff very well
• so fat it shouldn't be able to fly
• will let you pet it without getting agitated
• actually a flying panda
Hoverfly
• wears yellow stripey uniform to scare you
• can't actually do anything to you
• hangs out in fields
• follows you if it likes you
Paper Wasp
• looks scary, but only will attack if provoked
• sting hurts like a banshee
• will chase you if you swat at it
• has no concept of personal space
Yellow Jacket
• wants your food and will fight you for it
• never leaves you alone
• will sting you just because
• total jerk

In the first image, cloches are shown covering some young plants. Cloches are clear bell-shaped dome plant covers made for heat & freeze covers. The top holes provide ventilation, so opening them in the morning will keep the plant from being too hot during a sunny day.

Celebrating the Bond Between Birds and Native Plants

The Plants for Birds category of the Audubon Photography Awards aims to emphasize the flora along with the fauna in each shot—and the entries have only gotten better each year.

The diversity of species in these stunning images is a reminder that while birds rely on native plants for food, shelter, and nesting, plants and people need birds for pollination and seed dispersal, too. This symbiotic relationship is ... See more 🌼 News Update: The bulbs have arrived, so this Saturday's pickups between 10am - 1pm are good!

When you placed your order, you selected the King, Danbury or Walnut Cove Library for getting your order.

The exceptions to an April 15th choice is when we bring some orders back to your organization's meeting.
